New York, NY (October 2, 2024) – Newsweek Magazine has published its annual America’s Most Loved Workplaces® list, with Sourcebooks claiming the #2 spot among 200 of the nation’s most admired companies. This showcases Sourcebooks’ ongoing commitment to fostering a culture of connection, innovation, and respect for its employees, making it one of the best places to work in the United States.

The results were determined after surveying more than 2.6 million employees from businesses with workforces varying in size from less than 50 to more than 10,000. The list recognizes companies that put respect, caring, and appreciation for their employees at the center of their business model and, in doing so, have earned the loyalty and respect of the people who work for them.

“At Sourcebooks, we believe our success is deeply rooted in our people and the transformative power of books and stories,” says Dominique Raccah, Publisher and CEO. “Our commitment to our authors and the extraordinary books they bring to readers around the world shapes what we do together every day. And that commitment has helped us build a community where collaboration and innovation thrive. We’re not just creating a place where people love to work—we’re incredibly lucky to be creating a platform where our collective work can change lives, one book at a time.”

The recognition highlights key factors that set Sourcebooks apart, such as the alignment of employee and company values, inclusive leadership, and a work environment that encourages personal and professional growth. By fostering a culture where collaboration is not only valued but celebrated, Sourcebooks continues to grow as an industry leader, driven by its mission to empower people through books.

“It’s inspiring to see the list expand this year to 200 companies, a clear indication that organizations are truly committed to creating workplaces where employees feel valued and connected. We’re thrilled to celebrate their achievements as this recognition continues to grow,” says Nancy Cooper, Newsweek’s Global Editor in Chief.

BPI and Most Loved Workplace Founder and CEO Louis Carter says, "When companies set up employees to succeed, the entire organization thrives. This year’s Top America's Most Loved Workplaces® shows that fostering love of the workplace isn’t just the right thing to do—it’s a key driver of performance and retention. We’re excited to see the list grow to 200 companies this year, but that’s just the beginning. Our work won’t be done until every company in the world is Most Loved Workplace® certified and every employee loves showing up to their job each day."

As Sourcebooks continues to shape the future of publishing, it remains committed to creating an inclusive, innovative, and empowering workplace for its employees. By championing its mission to change lives through books, Sourcebooks is poised to build on its success and continue making a positive impact both in the publishing world and beyond.

Methodology

To identify the top 200 companies in this list, companies were evaluated and scored as follows: 50 percent of the initial score was based on direct employee responses to BPI's Love of Workplace Index® assessment. 35 percent came from BPI's direct interviews and written responses from company officials. The final 15 percent was derived from analysis of external public ratings from sites such as Comparably, Careerbliss, Glassdoor, Indeed, and Google. Newsweek then conducted editorial research on every company before the final list of 200 companies and their rankings was completed.
